THE LOTUS

MCMXXVII

PUBLISHED ANNUALLY BY THE
STUDENTS OF PEACE INSTITUTE
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

To Mr. Benjamin N. Duke, in appreciation of his interest in education, and in the building of a greater and better Peace, we gratefully dedicate this volume of THE LOTUS.

MR. BENJAMIN N. DURE

All of us are planning for a larger, more beautiful, more useful Peace Institute. Let us insist, in seeking these objectives, that Peace retain those ideals which have colored her history so distinctively for the past fifty-five years: her intimate home surroundings; her constructive and helpful contacts between teacher and students, and between student and student; her atmosphere of culture and refinement; her excellent academic standards; her emphasis upon training her students for leadership in state and nation; and her wholesome and sincere interest in things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.

The Lotus

*ALL year we've been painting a picture
Of life in our home of Peace,
To fasten on memory's canvas
The days that so soon must cease.*

*And now our picture is finished,
Bright lights and shadows are laid,
And friends, so dear to our memory,
In settings as dear are portrayed.*

Dear Old Peace

O DEAR old Peace, we love you
 When the sky is clear above you
 And the sunbeams shine upon you.

O dear old Peace, we love you
 When the sky is gray above you
 And the rain drops fall upon you.

O dear old Peace, we love you
 When the warm winds blow about you
 And the birds sing sweetly to you,
 Dear old Peace.

MRS. RUTH HUNTINGTON MOORE

Mrs. Ruth Huntington Moore

MRS. Ruth Huntington Moore was born in a lovely old brown-stone house in New York City. As a child she received an unusually good education from the best of schools and from her learned mother an exquisite lady of the old régime.

As a young woman, Mrs. Moore, who was then Miss Ruth Lewis, studied at the National Academy of Design and at the Art League in New York City. She next studied at Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia. During this period she was considered by all who knew her to be a promising young artist. She married Mr. John Moore, and for a time discontinued her studies in art.

At the death of her husband, Mrs. Moore went abroad to take up art again. She studied with Max Bohm, Henry Salem Hubbell, and Barlow Myron while in the north of France, and from Frederick MacMonnies and Raphael Collin while in Paris. While abroad Mrs. Moore took advantage of her splendid opportunities, and, through her love for her work and her intense study, achieved unusual recognition and success. Mrs. Moore exhibited in the Grand Salon des Artistes Françaises a wonderful picture which now hangs in our president's office.

On her return to America, Mrs. Moore came to the South to teach art at Peace. While here Mrs. Moore has painted many notable portraits. Among these are the portraits of Mrs. Adelaide Worth Bagley, the Hon. Josephus Daniels, Governor Jonathan Worth, Chief Justice Shepherd, and the Earl of Craven, her latest.

Mrs. Moore has been at Peace for eighteen years, and each year our appreciation of her splendid work and our affection for her have increased. Her inheritance from her distinguished ancestor, Jonathan Edwards, the elegance of old New York, and the richness of her travels and experiences have combined to make Mrs. Moore the outstanding and interesting person that she is.

Though we are proud of Mrs. Moore, we do not love her for her fame and glory, but for her generous character and love for all nature. It is no uncommon sight to see her walking hurriedly to the studio garden. If the dew has fallen heavily, she plods about the garden in heavy overshoes. Her lavender smock flapping in the breeze, she looks through two pairs of glasses at her deep blue morning glories, and her roses and lilies. Her pet rooster and hens scratch and cluck as she feeds them, from a blue pan, food carefully prepared by fond hands. All the while she is working in her flower beds, she talks to her chicks in soft, coaxing tones, and they follow her from one bed to the next. One has but to know Mrs. Moore to know that she loves and understands human nature as much as she does the beauteous nature out of doors. For this understanding, far seeing, and lovely part of Mrs. Moore, we appreciate her.

Senior Class Poem

FROM visions bright of long ago,
 Of greatest glory, brightest fame,
 A voice came and whispered soft,
 To us, Peace Institute, thy name.

We saw, with newly wakened hearts,
 New things, new worlds, new paths to tread,
 A multitude of untried ways,
 Of valleys deep, and peaks ahead.

We faltered long, but, firm at last,
 We walk together, hand in hand;
 We've walked by way of Wisdom's fount
 That we might drink and understand.

Draughts of knowledge deep and vast
 Have been our portion day by day;
 They've helped us in these recent years,
 They'll help us on the Future's ways.

But all the knowledge, wisdom, truth
 Will not suffice, nor naught will do,
 Unless to our class of Twenty-seven
 And to Peace Institute we're true.

So, Goddess of the Future, show
 To us our ways—as now, so then—
 Though separate paths we each shall take
 Keep us united till the end.

Laura Mabel Haywood.

Senior Class History

EARLY in the fall of 1924 eleven Freshmen strolled into Peace. We were quite sincere in our longing for knowledge, but, like practically all Freshmen, we had story-book ideas of chafing-dishes, midnight feasts, and brilliant week-end trips. After we had been classified and had started our work, however, we soon realized that we had no time to cultivate our story-book ideas. We found that school meant work as well as play. There were rules to learn, girls to meet, and classes to prepare for and attend.

As insignificant Freshmen, we felt very much flattered when the old girls began to rush us. We were invited to numerous parties and feasts. We were never without partners. We did not realize, at the time, that it was "rushing season" for the societies. Then came the great decision day. After much debating with herself, each one of us pledged herself to a society. But this was just the beginning. Will any of us ever forget initiation day? That day we had to obey the old girls slavishly.

Worldly wise we felt when, in September, 1925, we again entered Peace. Only seven of the Freshmen that had shyly strolled into Peace the year before experienced this glorious feeling. How anxious we were to see our old friends! How eagerly we sought the nine new girls that were to join our class. As wise old Sophomores we felt every ounce of our importance. Especially on the day when the Seniors gave us their privileges. How glorious it was to have a date on a school night! How we revelled in using the tele-phone! What comfort to study in our rooms!

In this year, also, we chose Miss Vera Rountree as our class teacher. In the years that have followed we have sought her advice many times, and have never been turned away. The class of '27 owes much of its success to the support and loyalty of Miss Rountree.

Fifty jolly Juniors registered in September, 1926; thirty-seven for the first time. At first we found college work very different from high school work, and it took much time to acustom ourselves to the change. But, with this accomplished, and the parties, rushing, and society initiation over, we put much time and thought on the biggest social event of the year, the Junior-Senior banquet. Could it be possible that we were to be hostesses at a banquet given at the Sir Walter hotel? It was possible and the banquet was a great success.

We had all dreamed of the time when we should be Seniors, but none of us had realized that the time for our dreams to come true was so near. This realization came when final exams were over and we were given Senior privileges during Commencement. And it was still more impressed on our minds when the Seniors pinned the green and white ribbons on us and wished us a successful Senior Year.

Thirty-nine of the Junior class returned in September, 1927, to work for their diplomas.

Lib Jennings, who had so wisely guided us through our Sophomore and Junior years, was again chosen as our class president. I am sure that we never could have chosen a more loyal and successful girl to lead our class.

In November, 1927, the $300,000 Peace drive began. We regret that we shall not be able to enjoy the "Greater Peace," but we pledge our heartiest support to the campaign.

The Junior-Senior banquet, which was held in the spring, was a very brilliant and beautiful affair. We felt very much flattered to be guests at such a lovely banquet.

And now, when the long dreamed of day has come, we do not want to leave. We realize that we have left many things undone; we have done some things that we regret. But we have enjoyed the days with our classmates and we love our Alma Mater dearly. We leave to you, O Peace, a promise to be ever loyal and true.

ERNESTINE GUNTHER, Historian.

Last Will and Testament

 COUNTY OF WAKE
 CITY OF RALEIGH

}
 PEACE INSTITUTE

To whom it may concern-Greetings:

WE, the class of 1927, realizing that we must soon relinquish the joys of school life and venture forth into regions unknown, do affirm and maintain that we are of sound mind and body; and, being in this condition, do will and bequeath to the persons and organizations hereinafter named, the following articles:

ARTICLE I

To our class teacher, Miss Roundtree, we leave all the love accumulated during our stay at Peace.

ARTICLE II

To the class of 1928

Section 1. Complying with the wishes of the class of 1926, we hereby bequeath all our virtues, including our talents, dignity, and good reputation, which we gained only through their kind thoughts.

Section 2. We leave a mind ready to grasp the fact that it takes more than baby work to pass Senior English.

Section 3. We leave a profound and loving reverence for Woolley.

ARTICLE III

To the class of 1929

Section 1. We leave the record of our Junior grades in hopes that they will profit by our good example.

Section 2. We will our much used and corrected Woolley books as a token of our love and affection.

ARTICLE IV

To the class of 1930

We leave our wisdom and ability to pass all our examinations.

ARTICLE V

To the class of 1931

We leave our sympathy.

ARTICLE VI

Section 1. To Miss McLelland we will and bequeath a student body for 1927-28 free from slum-children, morons, ignoramuses, and imbeciles.

Section 2. To Dr. Pressly we leave one billion dollars for the Peace Campaign fund.

Section 3. To Miss Ingraham we leave a new class for all students taking Senior English, in which the art of always having the windows opened to the right extent will be studied.

Section 4. To Miss Bacon we leave five copies of Dewey's How We Think.

Section 5. To Miss Metcalf we will a class that "follows."

ARTICLE VII

Section 1. Bert Sterling leaves her love of the opposite sex to Lois McArn.

Section 2. Laura Mabel Haywood, Mary Oliver Ellington, Blanche Taylor, and Mary Holleman combine in willing their stronghold in the front window seat to Alice Brogden and Bee Harden.

Section 3. Lib Clarke bequeaths her Senior dignity to Nella Ward.

Section 4. Sue Baker leaves her place on the Council to Janet Tucker.

Section 5. Lib Wooton leaves her curls to Lacy McAden.

Section 6. Polly Broadhurst wills her sophisticated airs to Laura Wall Everett.

Section 7. Isabel Hoffer bequeaths her happy-go-lucky disposition to Lib Allen.

Section 8. Hattie Belle Covington leaves her innocent ways to Aileen McKay.

Section 9. Lib Jennings wills her "finished technique" to Rebecca Brake.

Section 10. Rosemary McCoy bequeaths her quietness to Ann Ball.

Section 11. Kay Steele leaves five inches of her height to Lib Love.

Section 12. Dot Young wills her babyishness to Mary Tucker Davenport.

Section 13. Ernestine Guntharp leaves her record of a long stay at Peace to Virginia Evans.

Section 14. Margaret Nicholson leaves ten pounds of her weight to Betsy Baird.

ARTICLE VIII

We hereby appoint Betty Vaiden Wright and Ann Ball as executors of this our last Will and Testament, and desire that they accept the trust. We hereunto set our hands and affix the seal on this thirty-first day of May, nineteen hundred and twenty-seven.

Senior Class Prophecy

IT was Saturday, Miss McLelland's day in chapel, and the usual announcements were being made. Miss McLelland had hinted that she was saving the best announcement for the last, and that it concerned only the Seniors. So, when the last announcement was about to be made, each Senior stretched her neck to get a better view, and eagerly waited to hear the good news which was coming her way.

"Since the Seniors have but a few more weeks with us," said Miss McLelland, "I have decided to give them as many privileges and advantages as possible in the time remaining." We gasped. "I have found out," she continued, "that a very good, clean circus has been wintering here. Before they break up winter quarters to depart, they are opening up their side shows for one day only. And as a special concession, I will permit any Senior to go who hands in her name by two o'clock this afternoon. Now, we don't want to hear of any painted lips, because we don't want the audience to think that you are a part of the circus. Everybody who goes is to wear comfortable flat heels, and stay close to the chaperon. The day students may join us here to go out to the circus grounds. Let us sing number 395 as a recessional."

At 3:20 the bell in Central Hall rang, and, as quietly as possible, we Seniors assembled. We signed up and filed out two by two, in the customary Peace parade! Each face was merry and glad, and we walked hurriedly, with springing steps.

When we reached the show grounds, we tried to do as nearly as possible things that would suit everybody. We saw the largest snake alive and the alligator man. Then we ate peppery hot dogs with mustard, but without onions. (Note the first display of Senior dignity!) We decided that the thin woman had T. B., and that the tattooed man was her son. Of course Dainty Eva was as fat as could be expected.

Finally Lib Clarke, who always makes bright suggestions, reminded our chaperon that our fortunes yet remained untold. At the further end of the show grounds we saw, in a tapestry covered booth, a majestic and silent Hindu fortune teller. Some one said, "He looks real!" So we went to obtain some information from his co-worker, a tiny white woman with tired blue eyes. She said that the fortunes were only twenty-five cents each, and that one had to write one's name on a plain sheet of paper. The mystic took the paper, and, after saying strange, undistinguishable words, passed it through a magic solution, and one's fortune appeared on it. So we lined up and, one at a time, he gave us our fortunes. I have made a copy of them, and here they are—

Elizabeth Clarke:

Prepare yourself in voice, for some day you will become a great opera singer. You possess a light, musical laugh that will be a great asset to you. Steer clear of fair men, and any desire for the teaching profession.

Pauline Broadhurst:

You will soon receive a proposal of marriage. Though fate may seem against this step, it will end advantageously. You will find yourself able to assume the duties of a house-wife beautifully.

Rosemary McCoy:

There will be two openings for life to you in a short time. One will be a chance to marry and settle down. The other will be in Chautauqua work to do interesting Irish parts. An impelling force at the time will lead you to make the correct decision.

Isabelle Hoffer:

In two years you will have a grand offer for a lead in Zeigfield Follies. Success and happiness lie behind the footlights for you. The numbers seven and twenty-one are your lucky numbers.

Mary Holteman:

Within five years you will be in business with your husband. This business will necessitate many delightful trips. A promising career is ahead for you.

Elizabeth Jennings:

There is but one career ahead for you, that of a suffragette. You will be more popular with your friends if you won't be so down on marriage. Try to overcome your hatred for the opposite sex.

Roberta Sterling:

A career in bill collecting awaits you. Your talent in financial values will lead you to a great position. Leave Literature alone when too much is being Red.

Blauche Taylor:

Soon a government position will be offered you for training pigeons for air-service. Number thirteen is your lucky number.

Anne White:

Fame for you lies in becoming an emotional actress. After a successful career you will be willing to marry and live near watering places.

Mildred Stephenson:

Much learning and travel are in store for you. Articles written by you on "How to make Hair Curl" will proclaim your success.

Evelyn Peacock:

December is your lucky month, and twelve your lucky number. You have a special talent in languages. To make use of this talent would be of great advantage.

Dorothy Dick:

A fortune awaits you in making known your beauty secrets. The establishment of a smart shoppe in a city would make your work better known.

Martha Moomaw:

You will be the inventor of a priceless salve to make eyes bewitching! Namely, an eyelash grower.

Lucy Monroe:

Your sweet personality will enable you to make the social work which you will eventually do, a great success. Friday is your lucky day.

Margaret Nicholson:

Overcome your interest in the Turks. Resign yourself to becoming the piano player for the "Wabbling Willow Serenaders." This orchestra will not always play at the Grand.

Ruby Mitchell:

A happy future is seen ahead for you. Before you move to Snow Hill, remember that it never snows there, and that it is flat country. This bit of advice will help you to maintain your courage.

Dorothy Young:

You will achieve great prosperity as the president of a great pottery manufacturing company specializing particularly in mugs.

Kay Steele:

There is a great fortune ahead for you. You will learn of new discoveries and become a medical specialist, giving treatments and performing operations on the glands to increase growth.

Sallie Faison Best:

Your poise and grace will result in your becoming the wife of a diplomat. You will dwell in Washington. Guard carefully against any desire to get a divorce.

Adle Blue:

Your pink and white loveliness, and dainty airiness will assure you success in your dancing acts for Keith. Don't accept the proposal that you will get from your first dancing partner. And 'tis seen in the mystic ball that your second dancing partner has three wives and thirteen children.

Ophelia Edgerton:

A great opening awaits you in the profession of physical education. In this life you may apply all of your vim and pep!

Ernestine Guntharp:

After you have made your discovery as to why a fish does not perspire when he swims, you will be converted to the Christian Science faith. You will marry a red-headed choir singer and hold tent meetings from place to place.

Mary Smith:

Your robust and buxom strength will enable you to achieve success as a wiry acrobat of the great white tops.

Sue Hamilton:

A happy marriage and much prosperity is seen ahead for you. You will travel much in foreign lands.

The fortunes of Essie Buffaloe and Sallie Page Ruffin were alike, so I will give them as one:

You will make an expedition to the North Pole and remain there as the managers of a Hot Dog Stand. May you enjoy a prosperous partnership.

Sue Baker:

Marry the first man who sings to you "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

Shirley Williams:

After you have been married for three years, there will be a great temptation in your life, a desire to clope with your chauffeur. But the shape of his head will displease you, and your old love for your husband will return.

Laura Mabel Haywood:

While journeying through South America as a book agent, you will become interested in the social problems of that country. Do not carry your soap box speeches too far, for they might lead to a revolt.

Mary Oliver Ellington:

Do not become infatuated with the Prince of Wales, whom you will chance to meet in a few years' time. The profession of photography would be a very fortunate choice for you.

Verna Butler:

You will become a specialist in "Eat and Grow Thin" treatments. A dark man is seen in your future. He will add to your happiness.

Sarah Green:

A peculiar coincidence is that you will marry the distinguished owner of the road minstrel shows, "Silas Green from New Orleans." You will accumulate much wealth during your lifetime.

Elizabeth Bowden:

Obtain a position as a campaign manager. Great fame awaits you.

Hattie Belle Corington:

Exert all your vivaciousness and cleverness in your position as entertainer and hostess on a big ocean liner. Don't play for money while in the card rooms on board the ship. This would mean misfortune for you.

Rebecca Bowen:

You will go as a missionary to China and like the country so well that you will never return to America. You will marry a Chinese nobleman and have much happiness.

My own fortune is the last. I am delighted to find that in time to come I shall go to Africa to introduce to the natives a new hair shampoo! I shall represent the Lily White Non-Kink Corporation.

May we be prosperous and succeed in the destinies planned for us by the mystic Hindu.

ELISABETH WOOTON, Prophet.

*Oh, we will go a-sailing
 Upon the bonny sea,
 In a good ship built for Juniors,
 The likes of you and me,*

*And Peace will be our pilot,
 And through the sea we'll slip,
 In the best boat of life's ocean;
 That wondrous craft—Friendship!*

*The mast is straight, strong, steadfast Truth,
 Which will weather any storm,
 And with Sympathy, Loyalty, and Love,
 We'll keep sweet Friendship warm,*

*Thus may we sail forever,
 Our course kept straight and true,
 O'er life's boundless ocean,
 With courage ever new.*

March, onward march,
 The goal is straight before us,
 Bright is the light that guides us on our way,
 Wide is the world and God's blue sky is o'er us,
 Daughters of Peace,
 Be strong for her today.

March, onward march,
 The road is blazed before us
 By all the others who have gone ahead.
 Lift high the torch, that all may see and know us,
 Daughters of Peace,
 On whom the light is shed.

March, onward march,
 Be ever true and loyal
 To our ideals and that for which Peace stands—
 Ever abreast, to swell the column royal,
 Daughters of Peace,
 The world is in your hands.

Peace as It Isn't

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

LIB—A Peace girl.

KAY—A Peace girl.

CAROLINE—The maid.

Other Peace girls and teachers in masquerade.

Time: After the Campaign.

Place: "Greater Peace," in the room of Lib and Kay, and in the Peace Assembly room.

ACT I

Girl's room at Peace

Lib and Kay

KAY: Lib!

LIB: Uh?

KAY: Lib, it's ten o'clock and we have only an hour to dress.

LIB: Uh?

KAY: Lib, today is Wednesday, and we have two classes—let's get up.

LIB: Kay, please ring for the maid to bring our chocolate and I'll get up.

(Kay pushes the button conveniently placed at the head of her bed. The maid enters.)

KAY: Caroline, please bring our chocolate now.

CAROLINE: Yes, mum. (Caroline goes out, reappearing in a few minutes with a tray.)

LIB: Thank you, Caroline. This sponge cake is truly delicious.

KAY: What time do classes begin today, Caroline?

CAROLINE: I heard Miss McLelland say they start at eleven today, Mum.

KAY: Well, you may come back at ten minutes of eleven to take our silk cushions down to the class room for us.

CAROLINE: Yes, mum. (She goes out.)

KAY: That delightful chocolate was so refreshing. I'm still sleepy, though, for you know we didn't get in from the ball at the Sir Walter last night until one o'clock.

LIB: Yes, dear, I am sleepy too. Shall we go to classes today?

KAY: Oh, let's do. It will be fun;

LIB: All right. (She rises and picks her way daintily, among the lace frocks and jeweled slippers scattered on the floor, to the mahogany bureau.)

KAY (Going to the window and pushing aside the rich tapestry): Hello, sweet dicky bird, sing for me some.

LIB (Combing her golden curls): Kay, quit talking to the canary and listen to this. Miss McLelland has appointed us a committee to plan the entertainment for tonight.

KAY: Us? She said nothing to me!

LIB: Oh, she said she hated not to see you personally, but she was so busy trying to get a date for Sallie Faison Best and told me to talk to you. She said that this would be the first night since the winning of the campaign that no party was planned. She thinks it's such a shame for the girls to have to study—so boring.

KAY: What can we do?

LIB: Oh bud, I've the best idea! Let's have the faculty dress in masquerade costumes according to characters they'd most like to represent. You know they'll do anything to amuse the girls.

KAY: Yes, and the girls can dress up, too.

LIB: And refreshments served, and Buddy Fetter's orchestra!

KAY: That's fine—but it is ten minutes of eleven. We must start to class. What have we in English today?

LIB (Reads): "A love poem, richly descriptive, and vividly impassioned."

KAY: Oh that's easy! What have we in Math?

LIB (Reads): "Plot to scale, Mlle. Sendiny's Map of Affection, giving the depth of the river of Inclination and the area of the City of Affection. That's easy, too. But here is Caroline.

KAY: Caroline, bring the pink silk cushion today to match my dress and the gold one to match Lib's.

LIB: And bring the notebooks with the blue and gold lace covers for me. (They trip daintily down the stairs.)

ACT II

Assembly Room at Greater Peace

Various teachers and girls in masquerade costumes or in evening dress.

The scene opens with a grand march, played by Buddy Fetter's orchestra, screened by palms. Miss McLelland leads the march with Aileen McKay.

MISS McLELLAND (Leaving the march and walking up to Ellie Mae Garmon): Why, Ellie Mae, dear, you aren't studying at our party, are you?

ELLIE MAE (Gracefully drawing her Roman toga around her): Oh, no, Miss McLelland, I was only reading Horace.

MISS McLELLAND: Well, I would not deprive you of that pleasure, but I do wish you would join the merry makers.

ELLIE MAE: Oh, Miss McLelland, what a gorgeous Pierrette doll you make! And green is so becoming to you!

MISS McLELLAND: Thank you, Ellie Mae, I haven't felt better since we won the campaign. Is my nose shiny? Gracious, I must dance some more. (She trips friskily away on her toes.)

MISS STAGER (Chaperon of the ball): Miss Alice C. Strong! Come here this instant! Miss Ellis, look at those "shorts." I don't care if the gym classes do wear them! And that impossible middy and tie!

MISS ELLIS (Also chaperon): Shocking! And her shapely limbs enclosed in woolen socks, and canvas sneakers.

MISS STAGER: And those flapperish ringlets all over her head!

MISS STRONG (Flippantly clicking a pair of dumb-bells in their faces): A fig for that: (She trips guiltily over to Miss Brower, who is dressed as a blushing debutante) Miss Brower, let me demonstrate to you the value and importance of reducing by gymnastic exercise.

LIB WOOTON: Lib Jennings, I never did enjoy dancing, and I know you don't. Let's sit in this quiet spot and talk. Did you hear from Coonie today?

LIB JENNINGS (In a haughty tone): I haven't looked through my mail today, and I really don't care whether I hear from him or not.

LIB W. (Bewildered): Why Lib—but don't you love him?

LIB J.: Oh, well, you are not interested in Coonie and I wouldn't bore you for anything by talking about him.

LIB W.: Huh! Oh, have you seen Mrs. McLelland? She looks gorgeous—as usual—in red velvet trimmed with rhinestones. She is a Spanish dancer, of course, with her rich black hair becomingly arranged in Spanish style; and her accessories are all to match, red slippers and hose, and red earrings that drop to the shoulders. She got them in honor of the opening of Greater Peace.

LIB J.: Listen! I hear her musical voice in conversation.

MRS. McLELLAND (From the other end of the room): I just adore that jazzy piece the orchestra is playing! I get so bored by the classical things and old folk songs that the girls play on their victrolas. Come, Mr. Brawley, let's do the Charleston—or do you prefer the Princeton Jig?

Mrs. FOWLER (Breaking in on Mrs. McLelland and Mr. Brawley): Pardon me, but I want this dance. That fool Poole has worried me, and I must dance to get myself calm.

Mrs. McLELLAND: Oh, I'll forgive you. There is pleasure enough in watching the exquisite harmony of your tight yellow satin with Mr. Brawley's black velvet page costume.

Mrs. FOWLER (As she waltzes): Yes, it has always been my ambition to be an opera-singer, and that's why I'm dressed as one tonight.

Mrs. McLELLAND: Oh, Miss Metcalf, what a lovely gown you have on! You know those hoops are very becoming, and that powdered curl lying on your neck is just too sweet for words. And what an unusual idea to have a gilt frame around you. Why, you look like an old-fashioned picture!

Miss METCALF: That's what I represent.

Mrs. McLELLAND: Of what period?

Miss METCALF: The antebellum period.

Mrs. McLELLAND: And the exact date?

Miss METCALF: 1828, I think one hundred years before the opening of Greater Peace, but I am not sure. I wish very much that you'd look it up and be certain. Oh, heavens! Mrs. Moore has come in late! How unusual! Something must have happened to make her late.

Mrs. McLELLAND: I suppose it took her so long to get that classic Greek robe arranged, and she must have spent hours arranging those seemingly simple coils around her shapely head.

Mrs. MOORE (Strolling over to shy little Dol Brill, who is trying hard to fight down her embarrassment and enter into the spirit of the ball): Come, dear, regain your composure. Don't let Miss McLelland see you crying. It will hurt her so. Look at Marguerite Barnes. That pink and blue ballet costume is a lovely fit for her beautiful form. Dear, won't you go over and ask her to sing a solo for us? No one is looking at you. (Aside, to Virginia Evans) That poor child is so timid. Now, if she were only like you—

VIRGINIA: Mrs. Moore, do you think this beaded black georgette gown becoming? Of course, I am too tall to wear a trailing skirt, but I am always more satisfied if my dress is long. Oh, look at that gorgeous Miss Kirkpatrick in that moonbeam silver gown!

MISS KIRKPATRICK: Why Virginia, I didn't know you with your mask on! Have you seen Miss Bowman?

VIRGINIA: Yes, she has on a brilliant spangled orange dress with tight waist and flare skirt. I think she is a gypsy. If you keep looking you'll find her. (Spying her beloved Miss McLelland) Miss McLelland, about that week-end at Carolina—shall we go next Saturday?

MISS STEELE: Has either of you—oh, here she is! Bert, I should have known you anywhere by that sweet and girlish white ruffled muslin. Dear me, I thought I would wear a simple frock for once when I chose this orchid satin. (Bert murmurs something about how sweet she looks in orchid, and adjusts the pink bow on her black curls.) Look at that comical Kay Steele trying to look like Cleopatra!

BERT: I think she is charming.

MISS STEELE: Oh, Bert, no one can persuade you to criticize any one. Do go and help Lib Wooton. Her beautiful golden wig is slipping off!

AILEEN (Timidly, in a soft, gentle voice): May I help, too? Oh, Lois McArn, you startled me! Please don't make so much noise—my nerves are rather delicate. You know, since we won the campaign and built this gorgeous Peace I haven't got enough exercise.

MISS McLELLAND (Dancing with Rosalyn Sykes, who is dressed as a tall Romeo): How wonderfully our party is going! Every one is so happy and natural since the newness has worn off our assembly room and the lovely frescoes have become familiar. Isn't Peace heavenly since we won the campaign!

Peace as It Is

THE PEACE GIRL'S WEEK

SUNDAY

When Sunday comes we sigh with joy,
 No clanging class bells jar our rest,
 For on that day to church we go,
 All decked out in our room-mate's best.

From Sunday school and Church we come;
 Almost a thousand boys check by
 In Lincolns, Cadillacs and Fords—
 We bravely stifle down a sigh.

With eyes demurely downward cast
 We homeward bend our lingering step,
 Till thoughts of chicken and of sauce
 Bring dimples and an added pep.

MONDAY

When Monday morning's wash is done
 And taunting bravely in the sun,
 We dress and saunter up the street
 To show ourselves a little treat.

Into the Cally we trip with joy,
 Entirely ignoring that certain boy,
 And calmly order banana split,
 Which with the waiter makes quite a hit.

But as the shades of night drop down
 And shadows thicken all around,
 We Peaceward wend our weary way,
 Exhausted by our shopping day.

TUESDAY

When, on a Tuesday evening,
The dinner-bell sounds its call,
We think at once upon dessert
And hurry down the hall.

What joys awake in maidens' hearts,
What smiles flit round our lips,
As, crying, "What will it be tonight?"
Each eagerly dinner-ward trips!

First courses soon are cleared away,
Excitement is at its height;
And at last, long-awaited, appears dessert,
Greeted by gasps of delight.

"It's pie!" the maidens cry with glee;
"Chocolate!" "No! Caramel!"
"All wrong! I know it's lemon—
It's piquant sweetness I smell!"

Then quivering silence reigns,
But not the silence of gloom;
We devour the fragrant sweetness
As butterflies sip on a bloom.

WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday, all our lessons done,
Up the stairs we quickly run;
Into our dainty hiking shoes
We slip, and chase away the blues.

For miles, it seems, we hike along,
Singing a glad and joyous song;
Then back we rush, our faces ruddy,
All full of zeal for food and study.

THURSDAY

When Thursday comes, how glad we are
I cannot possibly say;
'Twould take more words than I can find,
'Cause Thursday's calling day!

We mustn't forget to put in our slips,
Or Miss McLelland will say,
"Why didn't you put your request in on time?
No, no!—well, this time you may!"

Then, happy, we skip and dance up the stairs—
We're going calling, you see!
Just 'spose she hadn't let us go;
In what pitiful plight we'd be.

We'd have to sit here in this dull old place
All afternoon, oh my!
And watch the other girls go out.
Dear me, how we should sigh!

'Cause you know you have an awfully good time
Just going to see some one
As you do when you are back at home—
It's really just lots of fun.

FRIDAY

When dinner's done on Friday night
 We laugh and joke with all our might,
 For soon, we know, it all must end
 And our way to chapel we must wend.

Miss May McLelland starts us right
 By telling of David's thrilling fight,
 Or of how Samson lost his glorious strength
 When his hair was cut by a scheming wench.

We sit enthralled, as still as mice,
 Our hair on end, hands cold as ice;
 Our Sunday's lesson thus we learn
 And our teachers' highest praises earn.

SATURDAY

We never worry 'bout our classes,
 But look at things through rosy glasses,
 On Saturday.

'Round the halls we gaily laugh,
 And romp and rush to get our bath,
 On Saturday.

We primp for hours, but are never late
 To get to see our dearest date,
 On Saturday.

Into the parlor each coyly trips,
 A trembling smile upon her lips,
 On Saturday.

From September to June

OPENING DAY

"Ahne! My, but you look good!" Screams, embraces, thrills, a ceaseless exchange of vacation experiences—these tell us that the old girls have returned.

And after them come new faces, with lost, pathetic air. Here is a little girl lugging four big suitcases, and there a tall girl flippantly paying the taxi-fare that she knows is too high. New luggage, handsome and shining, new shoes, the first new fall dresses, timidity and pretended sophistication—these tell us that the new girls have arrived.

ALICE CARR, '29.

MORNING WALK

Soon after rising gong rings in the morn
 Another bell rings, and we stifle a yawn,
 Tumble out of bed—as we should have done before—
 Toss on our clothes and rush for the door.

We come reluctantly down the stair,
 Rubbing our eyes and arranging our hair;
 At first we are slow and nearly asleep,
 But soon we get pep as we go up the street.

MARTHA MOOMAW, '27.

MORNING MAIL

A buzz and clatter fills Central Hall. Light laughter floats about. Every chair is packed and jammed with girls, sitting on the arms, on the backs, on each other's laps. A row of teachers lines the sofa, and an ever changing line of girls passes before it, nodding to this one, smiling at that, stopping to speak to another; "making time" with all. Girls lean against the balustrade, girls pass up and down stairs. Books are heaped everywhere. A long queue, noisy and irregular, winds from the corridor into the office. Such cries as "Hurry, the bell will ring!" and "Maggie, buy five greens for me!" sound above the other racket. Suddenly the post office door bursts open and Little Lady hurries out, a waste basket of letters in either hand. Calling "Proctors! Proctors!" she disappears into the parlor. A group of girls quickly joins her. The faculty rise as one woman and flock to the post office, laughing and talking, passing one another letters, flourishing papers from home. Girls shout to the proctors to hurry. Girls shout to their room mates to "Bring mine to class—I gotta go!" Hubblub reigns. Caroline, unperturbed, punches the bell, and, with loud expressions of annoyance, everyone disappears down stairs.

ROBERTA STERLING, '27.

HOMESICKNESS

Oh, school is a great place
 To pass nine months away;
 You like the girls and the school life,
 Till the newness dies away—
 Then you wish you were at home.

You like the days of sunshine,
 The days all bright and gay,
 But when the rain pours down in torrents
 From a sky of leaden gray—
 You wish you were at home.

When all the world is covered
 With a cold, white sheet of snow,
 When your fingers are blue, and you shiver,
 And your spirits are sinking low—
 You wish you were at home.

When the gong rings in the morning
 At the early hour of dawn,
 And you have to slip into icy clothes
 With many a shiver and yawn—
 You wish you were at home.

Yes, you love your work and teachers,
 You enjoy 'most every class,
 But when the work is piled up heavy,
 And you doubt if you're going to pass—
 You wish you were at home.

ALICE CARR, '29.

WINTER ON THE CAMPUS

Dismal, damp, forlorn,
 Forsaken by Summer
 The campus lies mourning,
 Branches writhe and toss
 In the cruel gales,
 And frozen tears fall
 From the sky.
 The leaves hang lifeless
 And limp, exposed
 To the torture of winter's
 Stinging lash,
 Groveling, the withered grass
 Bends low and clings
 Upon the earth.

MARGARET NICHOLSON, '27.

PEACE BELLS

There are bells of cheer
 And bells of woe;
 There are bells to come
 And bells to go.

There's a bell in the morning
 Which means a walk;
 There's a bell for Chapel
 Which means "Don't talk."

There's a bell for watch,
 For prayers there's one;
 There's one to begin work,
 And one when it's done.

One comes 'most anytime,
 It's loud and shrill,
 It wakes us and scares us—
 That's for "Fire Drill."

There's a bell we like
 When work is o'er;
 It means sleep, and rest,
 And "Close your door!"

ELIZABETH JENNINGS, '27.

SERENADES

A serenade in the days of old
 Was a sweet, romantic affair,
 And maidens never ventured forth
 Their boldness to declare.

But, hidden safely out of sight,
 Did list to delightful airs
 That floated up to the balconies
 Remote above the stairs.

And lovers, standing underneath,
 Poured out their hearts in song
 To the unseen lady of their choice —
 Unseen, but full of charm.

How different a serenade at Peace,
 With all its clamor and shout;
 You'd think the building was on fire
 To see the girls rush out.

They crowd against the railing,
 Laughing and singing with glee;
 Some glance from Jim or Johnny
 They hope to get, you see.

The serenades so long ago
 May have been more romantic,
 But I wonder if girls then got the fun
 That we do in our grand panic.

SALLIE FAISON BEST, '27.

A FIRE DRILL

Ding! Ding! Ding!

Such a clatter in the middle of the night,

We jumped up and yelled, "What's the matter?" with all our might.

"Fire Gong! Fire Gong!" cried several of the girls,

As they banged down their windows all in a whirl.

We rushed to the doors to form a straight line,

For we had to be there at a certain time.

Suddenly, a piercing shriek arose in the air—

Then Lib Wooton appeared, tearing her hair:

"My watch, my watch! Oh, I've dropped my watch!"

Then Bert Sterling rushed from her door,

Dressed in her fur coat and furbelows galore,

Holding a picture of "Red" close to her heart,

And screeched, "Oh my, let's start!"

We marched down the hall in a single file,

So scared that no one dared to smile.

Little Mrs. McLelland, with a night cap on her head,

Looked as though she had just jumped from her bed;

Peering through her glasses, she stood in the door,

Admonishing each girl to speak no more.

Then down the stairs, and out-of-doors—oh, what a sight!

For there stood the Council members laughing with all their might!

Then it suddenly dawned on us that this was Tuesday night.

So this was their idea of a joke well done!

Oh well, poor things, they must have their fun!

ELIZABETH LOVE, '29.

A LEISURE HOUR

There is a spot I fain would seek,
 With cushions soft and favorite book,
 Where memories, softly whispering, speak
 Of hours spent in this cozy nook.

It's on the stately pillared porch
 That clings to Peace's sturdy wall,
 Where jarring noises ne'er encroach
 And mid-day sunbeams mildly fall.

Here Zephyrus, in softest mood,
 Comes with a kind caress,
 Here how oft have the pigeons cooed,
 Far up in their high-lung nest!

And the moments flow as a warm golden stream
 Rolls lazily down the sand;
 And I rest, and read, and happily dream
 Of Peace in a peaceful land.

ELIZABETH CLARK, '27.

MY ROOMMATE

I've lived with her,
 I've laughed with her,
 I've fussed with her and downed her;
 For two whole years
 I've heard her woes,
 I've wondered where they found her.

Our days are o'er,
 I'm leaving her;
 Will she forget about me?
 But what is worst
 And puzzles me most—
 Will life be the same without her?

HATTIE BELLE COVINGTON, '27.

COMMENCEMENT

Freshmen think Commencement great,
 'Cause they've allowed to sit up late;
 All they do is loaf around,
 And spend 'bout half the time down town.

But the Sophomores, wise and bold,
 Have to work—so I'm told;
 The daisy chain they have to make,
 Just for their "Dear Seniors'" sake.

Juniors always seem at ease,
 Never move 'cept when they please;
 Quite important they should be
 For they'll be Seniors soon, you see.

The Senior Class is happy too,
 In spite of things they have to do;
 But, too, they hate to leave behind
 Every one that's been so kind.

Commencement time is great, you see,
 For every one is filled with glee,
 How free you feel, how full of fun,
 To know that all your work is done!

ERNESTINE GUNTHER, '27.

THE FAREWELL SERENADE

All is shrouded in darkness outside and inside the stately old building, save for a soft light from the half-grown moon flickering across the great white columns. All is still, for it is at the midnight hour. A faint spring breeze stirs the leafy boughs of the old oaks.

Suddenly the sound of distant singing breaks the silence. It approaches nearer and nearer. Everybody wakes and peers out of the windows. Below we see white-robed figures who continue the singing, now sweet and clear on the fresh night air. We hear familiar voices and realize that our Seniors are bidding us a last fare-well. They circle the building, singing our familiar songs, songs that stir our memories and waken dreams anew. "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love," floats up. Here and there a sigh is breathed, and more than once there is a break in the voices. From one of the upper windows a sob escapes, as some girl whose pal is a Senior realizes that she is losing her. Finally, the strains of the Alma Mater grow fainter, as the serenaders circle the building once again:

Lift the chorus, speed it onward;

Let it never cease;

Hail to thee, our Alma Mater;

Hail, all hail, to Peace!

All is silence again. The moon begins to sink and the gentle spring breeze sighs through the leafy boughs of the stately Oaks. But dear old Mother Peace does not sigh. She stands staunch and steadfast, for she knows her daughters will do their work "out in the wide, wide world."

Through the Looking Glass

As through the looking-glass they wonderingly step,
 Grown weary of their trip through mystic Fairy-land,
 And pause, returning, on the threshold of our land,
 The Land of Peace, of joy and happiness supreme,
 We hail our wanderers with laughter and with gladness,
 All representing well the fairest and the best
 Of many lovely girls who dwell in this fair place,
 With one accord acclaiming them as queens in their own realm.

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to interpret the ideas of the Staff and create in material form their vision.

From the art work and engravings to the finished book, this volume is the result of organized cooperation with the Staff.

Such able cooperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete cooperation from art work and engravings to the finished book, we offer unexcelled service. Complete service means undivided responsibility as to the result—one organization to correspond and talk with—one trained director to merge the many ingredients into the finished product.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.
